The Mystery of the Good Old Cause briefly unfolded in a Catalogue of such Members of the late Long Parliament, that held Offices both Civil and Military, contrary to the self-denying Ordinance hereunto annexed. Together with the Sums of Money and Lands which they divided among themselves during their sitting, (at least such as was dispos'd of publickly.) London: Printed in the first year of Englands Liberty, after almost twenty years slavery. 1660.

Three leaves unnumbered, pp. 1—56, and Postscript. This book, which relates in part to Buckinghamshire Roundheads, was reprinted under the title of Sarcastic Notices of the Long Parliament, in 1863.

The newspapers of this eventful period should be searched for statements relating to the Civil War, which statements, however, must be received with caution. In England's Memorable Accidents, a paper circulated in 1642, occurs (e.g.) the passage following:—

"Thursday, the 3 of Novem. The Lord General [Essex] . . . with his whole Army, consisting of 12000 horse and foot, and 37 pieces of Ordnance, marched yesterday out of Northampton to Oulney in Buckinghamshire, and intended to be this night at Brickhill." (Northampon N. and Q., Vol. I., p. 244.) This was a year before the pillage at Oney by the Royalists, mentioned in A true and punctual Relation, etc. 1643.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS.

The first newspaper printed and published regularly in a provincial town of England was the Mercurius Aulicus, which was commenced at Oxford, 1 Jan., 1642; but as its publication in that city was owing to the residence of the Court there, it cannot be regarded as a mere local newspaper. For a like reason, the official journal now styled The London Gazette was published at the same place, from Nov., 1665, to Feb., 1666, and then called The Oxford Gazette. A Worcester paper appeared in 1690, and other journals were issued at Norwich and other provincial towns, from 1706. The following papers, published in neighbouring countries from the years mentioned, have at times contained more or less of Buckinghamshire news. Some of them are still continued:—

The Northampton Mercury. 1720.
The Reading Mercury. 1723.
The Northamptonshire Journal. In or before 1741.
The Oxford Gazette. 1745.

The Oxford Journal. 1753 (or 1740?).

The second and fourth of these papers were joined together in or before 1755.

The Buckinghamshire Herald.

No. I. was published at Aylesbury, on Sat., 28 July, 1792, price 3\(\frac{1}{2}d\).
"It had" (as stated by Mr. R. Gibbs, in a recent lecture) "an existence of eighteen weeks only at that town, the last issue being dated 24 Nov., 1792. It was then removed to Berkhampstead," and called

The Buckinghamshire, Bedfordshire, and Hertfordshire Herald.
"The 23rd of Nov., 1793, is recorded" (Mr. Gibbs adds) "as its last appearance." But that a paper styled The Buckinghamshire Herald existed in 1795, appears from a reference to it in Records of Bucks, Vol. II., p. 158.

The Bucks Chronicle.

First published in 1820, price 7d. It was afterwards called

The Bucks, Beds, and Herts Chronicle. "It had" (says Mr. Gibbs)
"a chequered and lingering existence for some years."

The Bucks Herald.

A paper so called, published at Aylesbury every Saturday, was commenced 7 Jan., 1832. Its full title has varied from time to time. No. 1028, published at Aylesbury, 18 Oct., 1851, is styled

The Bucks Herald and Uxbridge Advertiser . . . with which is incorporated The Windsor and Fton Journal.

The Bucks Gazette and Windsor and Eton Express.

This journal was commenced in 1824, by Charles Knight, senior, and Charles Knight, junior. It was printed partly at Windsor and partly at Aylesbury. "The joint publication was continued at Aylesbury and Windsor for some years, but was eventually abandoned at Aylesbury, and the result was two distinct papers. The Bucks Gazetts disappeared some years ago, but The Windsor and Eton Express still flourishes at Windsor." (Gibbs, Worthies of Buckinghamshire, p. 237.) The latter paper dates from 1811 or 1812.

The Bucks Gazette. Published at Aylesbury every Saturday. Advertised in Oct., 1830, as "the only newspaper in Buckinghamshire." Called (as it seems), in 1833,

The Aylesbury and Bucks Gazette.

The Bucks Advertiser and Aylesbury News.

Published at Aylesbury every Saturday. Commenced 3 Dec., 1836. "Advanced Liberal." Enlarged 1837, 1853, 1881.

The Aylesbury News, which commenced in 1836, is the same paper.

The Bucks Chronicle.

Mentioned in 1852, as published at Aylesbury every Saturday.

Afterwards (as it seems) The Bucks Chronicle and Bucks Gazette, published at Aylesbury every Wcdnesday and Saturday. Commenced Sat., 30 Nov., 1839. "Liberal." These papers have within the last few years been amalgamated with the "Conservative" Bucks Herald.

The Windsor and Eton Journal.

Incorporated (before Oct., 1851) with The Bucks Herald.

The Olney Star. A Monthly Journal.

Only four numbers issued, March.—June, 1853. See p. 39.

The South Bucks Free Press.

Published at High Wycombe. No. 1425 is dated 4 Aug., 1882. "Liberal."

Croydon's Weekly Standard.

Published at Newport-Pagnell, every Saturday. Commenced 1 Jan., 1859. Price 1d.

In 18. . the title was altered to The Bucks Standard.

The Newport-Pagnell Chronicle, and North Bucks and West Beds Advertiser.

A weekly paper, price one penny. The first number was dated Saturday, March 4, 1865. This journal came to an end before the conclusion of the year. Mr. John Milbourne was the proprietor.

The Newport-Pagnell Gazette.

Established 1867. Recently described as The Newport-Pagnell Gazette, Wolverton Times, and Olney Free Press. Published every Friday afternoon, price 1d.

The Fenny Stratford Times.

A weekly paper, commenced 1879. See below.

North Bucks Times and South Beds Chronicle.

Established 1879 as The Fenny Stratford Times. Published weekly at Fenny Stratford. The above title is from "No. 401. Thursday, April 28, 1887. One Penny." The politics appear to be "Conservative."

The Aylesbury Reporter.

Published at Aylesbury.

The Flying Post.

Published at Fenny Stratford.

The extreme difficulty of obtaining trustworthy information respecting Local Newspapers must serve as an apology for any errors or omissions in the foregoing list. Any corrections which may be received will be gladly inserted in the concluding sheet.

NOTICE.

With one sheet more, which it is proposed to issue as early as conveniently may be, this List will be completed. The compiler is already in possession of additions to several of the divisions, for which his thanks and those of the Architectural and Archæological Society for the County of Buckingham are due to several correspondents. Any further additions, as well as any corrections with which he may be favoured, will be duly inserted in the inevitable Supplement.
